SCRIPTURE REFLECTION

That inner-seeing, that faith, saved Bartimaeus. And that faith brought the sunlit world into his eyes. His inner vision saved him and made possible the first sight he beheld: Jesus, the Son of David, the Rabboni, his savior, the object of his faith. Bartimaeus followed Jesus up the road. One can imagine that one road forked off into others, intersecting another, and another, and another. There is no telling where faith led Bartimaeus. He must never have tired of telling the story over and over and over. The story of his salvation was never an old story for him; it was always a source of amazement.

The play of sight and insight, of vision and faith, always holds our imagination. When we begin in faith, the world reveals gifts that might otherwise be hidden. We, like Bartimaeus, begin in faith, and then we see—and see and see. Faith comes before seeing. If we believe that God is with us in our world, we will see God operative in our world and in our lives. We begin believing and go on to ask ourselves how this faith sheds light on our everyday life as we go up the road following him.
