

29th Sunday in Ordinary Time Reflection

The narrative broadens to include the indignant disciples who were clearly annoyed at this grab for power by James and John. Jesus is not going to follow the familiar ranking order. He will not be a mighty one who wrests power from the weak and then uses it against the vanquished, just so they remember they are overruled and feel the heel of the ruler's boot. For Jesus, the mark of greatness is service. The leader, ruler, throne-dweller, is the one who has no throne. The leader is the one who serves, and in the end, who gives his life up for the others—his whole life. James and John and the rest of the disciples did not quite count on Jesus' answer being this all-consuming. There are new norms in the kingdom Jesus promises, and these norms turn upside-down everything that society believes to be important. The rich are not powerful. The strong are not superior. The greatest people of Jesus' kingdom are the ones who serve others. This service is completely from the heart and it is a loving act. The servant comes with no hope of recompense, for Jesus made it clear that the servant will be rewarded abundantly in his kingdom. The other disciples were as unclear as James and John about this new kingdom, but they certainly had a sense that it would be different from the sort of rule they knew. In reality, that's about all we know, too. There was a trust the other disciples had, and we must trust as well.

The IHN coordinators would like to take this opportunity to thank all of our volunteers for a very successful first week of welcoming guests into the convent. We received three thank you notes that we wanted to share with you. "Thank you so much for all of the food, drinks, cozy sleeping areas, and all of the support this week. My family met nothing but nice people who took time out to help us. We were treated like normal people and not like some homeless family. We will never forget our stay and may you please keep us in your prayers. We could really use it because we are going through one of the worst times of our life. Thank you all for being there for us. It takes special people to help the way you all did."
